Loudoun Free Clinic Winter Celebration Features “Boots, Beer & BBQ” on Nov. 30

The Loudoun Free Clinic is teaming up with Cookology, a recreational culinary school at the Dulles Town Center, and Great Country Farms in Bluemont to sponsor its Seasons of Care Winter Celebration on Friday, Nov. 30. This unique event will be held at The Stable at Bluemont Vineyards from 6-10 p.m.

Entitled “Boots, Beer & BBQ,” the celebration will feature an all-local menu of award-winning barbecue, tasty brews, a delectable dessert buffet, skilled artwork and crafts, and of course, line dancing. The growing list of vendors for the event are all donating their services at no charge to the Clinic.

“We are indebted to Maria Kopsidas of Cookology for supporting the Clinic in organizing such a fun-filled evening for a worthy cause,” said Debra Townsend, Executive Director of the Loudoun Free Clinic. “That nearly 100% of the proceeds from our event will benefit the Clinic is an amazing outpouring of community support for our services to the those in need of medical care,” Townsend said. She noted that for every $1 donated to the Clinic, $8 in medical services are generated to serve uninsured Loudoun residents.

Sponsored by the Clinic’s CareAMBASSADORS, a number of area small to mid-size businesses, the event promises a festive evening. Tickets are $75 per person and tables of 10 are $650. Transportation from designated points in Loudoun is also being arranged. Tickets may be purchased online at www.loudounfreeclinic.org. Additional sponsors are welcomed, and for more information call the Free Clinic at 703-779-5420 or visit www.loudounfreeclinic.org.

In continuous operation since 2002 as a project of the Catocin Foundation, the Loudoun Free Clinic delivers quality medical care at no charge, serving uninsured residents of Loudoun County, between the ages of 18 and 64. Governed by an all-volunteer board of directors and supported by the volunteer services of area physicians, healthcare organizations, businesses and individuals, the Clinic's mission is to improve access to healthcare services for the uninsured, thereby improving the overall health status of this segment of Loudoun's population
